Decorate a dining or living room's wall with this elegant and colorful antique screen. Crafted in France circa 1880, the four-panel folding screen, is hand-painted with an elaborate floral still life. Each panel features a seamless continuation of the artwork, depicting a vibrant bouquet of multicolored flowers, including roses and other blooms, arranged in a golden urn. The background transitions from earthy tones at the base to a soft, atmospheric sky above, enhancing the depth and realism of the piece. The scalloped top edges of the panels are bordered with intricate detailing, fabric trim, adding a touch of refinement. The piece is crafted with a leather-like material for the painted surface, framed in a warm-toned wood. The back is upholstered with a colorful paper with floral motifs. The home decor is in excellent condition commensurate with age with a crackled paint finish, and adorns rich vibrant colors in a beige, green and white palette. This screen serves both as a decorative artwork and a functional room divider, embodying elegance and timeless craftsmanship. Each panel is 16"W. Measures: 64" W x 72" H.
