Decorate a kitchen wall or a breakfast room with this large antique majolica plate. Sculpted in France circa 1930, and signed by French artist "L. Lefranc", this French barbotine platter features a beautifully crafted floral motif in high relief, showcasing exquisite attention to detail. Delicate roses, lilacs, and morning glories are meticulously sculpted, with each petal and leaf highlighted in soft, naturalistic colors. The flowers seem to bloom directly from the surface, creating a three-dimensional effect that is both elegant and lifelike. The background is painted in a soft blue, providing a serene contrast to the vibrant floral elements. Barbotine, a type of pottery known for its richly colored and textured decorations, was highly popular in France during the late 19th century and early 20th century. The signature "Lefranc" suggests the work of a skilled artisan, adding to the platter's historical and artistic value. The wall decor is in excellent condition and adorn rich pastel colors. 15.25" Diameter
