Decorate a study, living room or den with this beautiful and colorful pair of antique oil on canvas paintings! Painted in France circa 1890, both artworks are set in carved gilt wood frames and illustrate picturesque, ocean-front scenes in coastal France in a post impressionist style; one of the paintings is signed in the lower left by the artist, A. Michel, one of the pseudonyms of Eugene Galien-Laloue (1854-1941). The maritime paintings each show different viewpoints of large 18th century ocean-fairing ships with masts furled docked in a bay with people milling about the shoreline at the turning of the day; the sky in both paintings glows with the light of dawn or dusk. The 19th century paintings are in excellent condition with rich, realistic colors; throughout each of the paintings, the viewer can get a sense of the artist's expertise in the rendering of space, light and a beautifully hazy atmosphere. Listed in the Benezit (see last picture). Both artworks were authenticated by French expert Noe Willer. One frame 2 inches wider than the other. Eugène Galien-Laloue (1854-1941) was a French artist of French-Italian parents. He was a popularizer of landscapes, marine and street scenes, usually those illustrating autumn or winter settings. His paintings of the early 1900s accurately represent the era in which he lived: a happy, bustling Paris during la Belle Époque. His paintings regularly include horse-drawn carriages, trolley cars and its first omnibuses. Galien-Laloue's works are valued not only for their contribution to 20th century art, but for the actual historical content which they document. His work can be seen at the Musée des Beaux-Arts, Louvier, Musée des Beaux-Arts, La Rochelle, Mulhouse, France. Some artists or writers are content to have a pseudonym so as to disguise their work. Eugène Galien Laloue was particularly adept at establishing many identities, since over the course of his career he worked under three main pseudonyms: J. Lievin – after a soldier he met during the Franco-Prussian war, E. Galiany – an Italianized version of his own names, and L. Dupuy – after Dupuy Léon who lived in his same area. Even his name “Galien” is questionable, since on occasion he spelled it with one “l” and on his birth certificate it is spelled “Gallien”. Why the artist went to such great lengths to perplex audiences and historians is the question that remains to be answered. Despite preoccupation with the reclusive nature of this man, he depicted Paris and the surrounding landscape with his cool palette; in doing so, he became another recorder of popular Parisian life. He balanced his architectural interest in Paris with several landscape and marine views, and was an equally if not more proficient draughtsman. Galien-Laloue was also in exclusive contract with one gallery and used at least 9 other names besides A Michel, Lievin and Galiany: "Juliany", "A. Languinais", "E. Kermanguy", "Dupuy", "H. Lambert", "E. Lefevre", "Dubois" and "Dumoutier". Measures: Larger: 29" W x 33.5" H. Smaller: 27" W x 33" H.
